Heartbreak and Hope remembered at New Park

On July 16, I shared a moment of remembrance with Pearly Wa, the mother of Hser Ner Moo, on what would have been her 20th birthday. So many emotions flooded back from the time our community learned of the little girl's disappearance and death. It was a turning point in both my career in public service and my personal life, as I came face to face with a mother's worst fear. We all vowed that never again would a child be lost or slip through the cracks.

This became a defining moment in our City. Out of the confusion and heartbreak, we found so many friends and helpers. The number of people who committed to helping our youth, particularly refugees, grew by leaps and bounds. We realized this was a movement. Donations, volunteers and community partners flooded in. A community center was established at the South Parc Townhomes, in Hser Ner Moo's name. It began offering preschool, afterschool activities, parenting classes and a warm welcome to our country. Our city became an integral part of this refugee community and organized the contributions of United Way, Granite School District, numerous churches and university service programs. And thus, Promise South Salt Lake was born. Our commitment to education, health, safety, and prosperity became a public policy and priority and we now serve 4,000 residents each year.

I have shared this story many times, and I know many of you have, too. It is a painful memory, and I empathize with anyone who has lost a friend or family member to senseless violence, including many of you fighting today for equity and justice in our society. To you, I want to spread a message of hope. We can and will change the odds for all of our kids, all of our families.

This past month we dedicated a new park in memory of Hser Ner Moo, and named it Promise Park. It sits just north of the townhomes on 500 East and the S-Line and is now a favorite place for neighborhood youth to play. My wish is that the park is a lasting reminder of our hopes for every single person in this City, and the promise to help one another reach them.

Citizen Review Board

The City Council began discussion on establishing a SSL Citizen Review Board in July. It was decided that small group meetings to determine policy and direction would be the next step. The Police Chief, Mayor and City Council are committed to creating a sustainable Citizen Review Board that serves the community well. See page 1 of this section for contact information of all elected officials – input, feedback, and dialogue are encouraged, please reach out.

Notice of Sewer Rate Increase

Effective July 1, 2020, the South Salt Lake Sewer Utility rate increased. This impacts all residents north of Mill Creek. The new rate will apply to the July billing, due 8/20/2020.

Why are rates increasing?

This is due to a $210 million upgrade at Central Valley Water Reclamation Facility (CVWRF). This will keep CVWRF in compliance with federal EPA regulations aimed at lowering phosphorus levels in recycled wastewater.

What is the City doing to offset cost?

The City has secured a Hardship Grant for $2 million, along with a 0%-interest loan for the remaining $9,248,000 needed to cover our portion of the cost of this project.

What is the new rate?

Sewer fees have increased by $2 per 1,000 gallons of winter water usage. For the average household, this is an additional $8-$10 per month.

This increased fee enables the City to make scheduled payments on the 0% interest loan, our portion of the CVWRF upgrades.

City Council Corner – Change Comes from Dialogue, Not Violence

By Shane Siwik, City Council District 5

Between Covid-19 and civil protests, this year has seen its share of events that seem to put us at odds with each other. From issues about wearing masks and the role of government to questioning the need for police reform, we seem to all have different opinions. And those opinions can be loud at times.

The right to openly debate policy, to vigorously defend our beliefs is what this country was founded on. The very framers of our nation challenged each other from various points of view until the framework of our country was formed. These ideas and exchanges are healthy and important in finding solutions.

So too are peaceful protests part of the fabric of our society. Groups have protested the need for change since the inception of this country. And these peaceful protests have brought many needed changes.

Our constitution grants us the freedom of speech against our government. But it must remain peaceful. Otherwise the message of the protest gets lost.

Recently, the role of the police in our community has been raised. Yes, there are incidents that occur within law enforcement that violate not only the law, but all of human decency. But there are so many more examples of good officers defending the citizens they have sworn an oath to protect. Is there room for, and even need for improvement? Absolutely. But by painting a broad brush over all law enforcement not only is unfair, it creates a sense of hopelessness; it reinforces a false narrative that there is no good in the world.

The officers of South Salt Lake work hard to defend this community. Yes, there is always room to do better. And as part of that process, the city is developing a citizens' review board. The role of that board is currently being discussed.

Of course, we are also living in a pandemic. That too has brought a list of changes in how we go about our lives. New rules and laws have been made. And in these efforts, we as your representatives try to make the best decisions.

Passions run high when we feel intrusions into our lives or misdeeds to ourselves or others. But now more than ever, please be involved. Be part of the solutions. Be engaged in the conversations. .

Note: Opinions expressed here may not be representative of all Members of the City Council.

Street Trees at Granite Library

Work is underway for the new Salt Lake County Granite Library and things are changing fast. One thing is staying the same, though – the stately ash trees on 500 East. Upon city request, the trees were incorporated into the new design, keeping the neighborhood character along 500 East. The contractor and county worked with a professional arborist to evaluate the trees, prep them for construction with pruning and treatments, and then designate a protection zone for the roots where no construction activities are permitted. This is a high standard of care, but the trees are worth it! Many of these trees are nearing 100 years old, as they were planted in the early days of Granite High in the 1920s.

WHAT'S A TREE WORTH?

- Trees properly placed around buildings can reduce air conditioning needs by 30 percent and can save 20–50 percent in energy used for heating.
- Healthy, mature trees add an average of 10 percent to a property's value.
- A mature tree can often have an appraised value of between $1,000 and $10,000.

Commitment to Community

As our summer comes to an end and we look at getting back to school, we usually host the National Night Out Against Crime Community Event. Due to COVID-19, this annual national coordinated event has been canceled. We look forward to meeting again in person next year.

Here at South Salt Lake Police, we are steadily handling calls for service, meeting with business owners, conducting property checks, helping out at the men's homeless resource center, and helping preserve life and property throughout the City.

We have had two significant cases in which our officers have acted expeditiously to help others. I would like to highlight these as they called for the utmost professionalism, quick action, and exceptional effort. The first case was when officers were called to Golf the Round on a suspicious activity and located a submerged vehicle in the pond with a child strapped into a car seat. Officers made multiple attempts to swim under the freezing water to pull an 18-month-old from his car seat. The officers recovered the toddler and immediately had medical perform life-saving measures. Everyone on the scene that evening and throughout this challenging investigation performed in an expedited, heroic, and selfless manner.

The next case is from 3300 South and 300 East when a truck traveling at a high rate of speed went through the front interior of a home. There were three children in the living area at the time of the crash. A 10-year-old boy was pinned by the truck. He sustained multiple injuries. Police and Fire Department personnel acted in an expedited, meticulous manner to extricate the 10-year-old and ensured the other children were safe. The injured boy was transported to an area hospital and is in the care of a physician.

I see our officers respond to critical, traumatic calls and perform in a selfless, professional and heroic manner daily. I commend them for their continued professionalism and commitment to the South Salt Lake community. They don't just perform their job duties, they rise the many challenges presented and fulfill their duties with expertise and dedication to our community.

Fire Department ISO Review

Fire continues to be the largest single cause of property loss in the United States, and homeowners typically purchase fire insurance to cover losses. In order to determine what a property owner should pay for fire insurance, departments participate in an Insurance Services Office (ISO) Public Protection Classification (PPC) audit. The ISO fire score, is a rating that determines how well a local fire department can protect your community and home. South Salt Lake will be participating in this audit starting this month. This extensive inspection will take a few days to complete but, it's well worth it.

The Insurance Services Office is an independent company that analyzes the structural fire suppression delivery system provided in communities. A PPC number is determined based on this analysis, and insurance companies use PPC information to help establish fair premiums for homeowner and commercial fire insurance. Assuming all other factors are equal, the price of fire insurance is, in general, lower in communities with a good PPC than in those with a poor PPC. Public Protection Classification numbers range from 1 to 10; South Salt Lake currently has an ISO rating of 3, placing us in the top 5% in the country.

The grading system for the PPC program used by ISO is derived from the Fire Service Rating Schedule (FSRS) and each area of service receives a grade or deficiency points depending on the scope and quality of service. Four areas are considered in the grading of the community's fire suppression capabilities: emergency communications, fire department operational considerations, water supply, and the community's risk reduction and fire prevention programs. Each section is scored, with a total of 100 points possible.

Emergency Communications – this examines how well we receive and dispatch alarms. Areas included are the reporting system, communication center, computer-aided dispatch facilities and dispatch circuits for fire department alerting. There is a maximum of 10 points on the communications section, and checks compliance with NFPA 1221 standards.

Operational Considerations – they review the distribution of fire companies, number of firefighters available to respond to emergencies, and type of training and numbers of those who participate in training at the company level. Also considered are the fire department testing of pumps, apparatus inventories compared to NFPA 1901 standards and the deployment of pumper and ladder companies based on response distance and time constraints for a first alarm structure fire assignment, as well as standard operating procedures for structural firefighting and the establishment of an incident management system. This area allows for a maximum of 50 points.

Water Supply – this compares the available water supply at representative community locations with the needed fire flows for those locations. AWWA guidelines are used to ensure there is a sufficient water supply for fire suppression beyond the daily maximum water consumption of the community. Hydrant size, type, and installation, as well as the frequency and completeness of hydrant inspection and flow-testing programs are all considered in this review. This section is worth 40 points.

Community Risk Reduction – this final section takes into account fire prevention code adoption and enforcement, public fire safety education, and fire investigation. This allows for extra credit of up to 5.5 points, for a possible total of 105.5.

After completing the field survey, ISO analyzes the data and calculates a PPC score. The final rating received may well have an impact on insurance premium rates within a community. The lower the number the better rating received, creating the possibility for lower insurance rates. So, as we go through this audit we will keep our mission statement in mind; "The South Salt Lake Fire Department will always endeavor to protect lives and property with dedicated people providing exceptional service to our community's diverse needs."

Terry Addison

Emergency Preparedness

Preparedness Tip #8: Get Familiar with Your Company's Emergency Preparedness Plan

If disaster strikes at work you need to be prepared. Being proactive in the preparation for emergencies is crucial. In addition to knowing multiple exits, you should participate in workplace evacuation drills and consider keeping some emergency supplies at the office. Visit www.ready.gov and click on "Ready Business" for more information.

Crosswalk Safety

Back to School means more pedestrians along roadways and occupying crosswalks. Pedestrians have the right-of-way in crosswalks. You must come to a complete stop if anyone is walking in the crosswalk.

Granite School District gets back in session on August 24 (see page 7 for details). Children will be walking to and from school throughout the day. If the flashing lights are on for a school crossing the speed limit is 20 mph. Drive aware and help keep our youth safe.

The SSL Police Department wishes to thank the South Salt Lake Honorary Colonels for their continued support of our officers. For decades, they have supported our department from behind the scenes. This past month, they came forward publicly to voice their support for our officers. We are fortunate to have their support, thank you to all our Honorary Colonels!

New Roots Farmers Market at Central Park

The New Roots Farmers Market is backed by New Roots of Salt Lake City—a subsidiary of the International Rescue Committee (IRC). Participating farmers gain access to land and are then able to sell their produce at the Farmers Market. Specializing in ethnic crops, many locally grown vegetables (bean leaves, amaranth, red and daikon radishes, lambsquarter, solanum and pumpkin shoots) are impossible to find at conventional markets and are highly desirable to those who love them. The market also includes a food pantry, free kids lunch and activities, music and is a safe gathering space for all. Now through October 7th, Wednesdays 4:00 – 6:30 p.m., Central Park, 2797 S. 200 East.

The results are in from last month's survey, and the fan favorite is..... Fitts Park!

As one resident commented: "Fitts Park is great because I can access Mill Creek (and the trail that runs alongside it), as well as some great pavilions and big, shady trees. It's the perfect spot for an afternoon picnic." The City has several 'original' parks including Fitts (67% of the vote), Lions (6.7%), and the Jordan River Parkway (20%). There are also a growing number of new parks, including Central Park and Promise (Hser Ner Moo) Park, which gathered a few votes, but need more fans. Check them out sometime!
